InfraCap founder Ashutosh Aman has joined forces with Tyler Hill – the renewable energy developer and technical advisory group – to launch Tyler Hill Capital, an international infrastructure advisory firm.

Aman, an established infrastructure investment and finance professional with more than 20 years of international experience, today (21 May 2025) announced the launch of Tyler Hill Capital.

Tyler Hill Capital is headquartered in the UK and has offices in the UAE and India.

It provides capital raising advisory, bid advisory, restructuring guidance on infrastructure assets, financial modelling, and valuation services. The firm will also offer technical advisory services on renewable energy projects through an affiliate of Tyler Hill, integrated financial and tech advisory skills.

Aman, chief executive of Tyler Hill Capital, said: “I am thrilled to launch Tyler Hill Capital at a time when infrastructure and energy transition are at the heart of global investment agendas.

“With a proven track record of closing over $12 billion in debt and $500 million in equity across renewables, digital infrastructure, ports, oil and gas, and power, I look forward to building a world-class advisory platform that bridges financial and technical excellence for our clients.”

Milind Agrawal, shareholder and board member of Tyler Hill, added: “Partnering with InfraCap to launch Tyler Hill Capital strengthens our commitment to the global energy transition.

“This is a unique opportunity to integrate technical advisory into the financial strategy of infrastructure development, ensuring our clients receive the most holistic, innovative, and bankable solutions.”

Tyler Hill Capital’s mandate will span projects across renewables, digital infrastructure, transport and logistics, water and wastewater, waste-to-energy, social infrastructure, energy transition, power and utilities, and O&G – supporting private sector clients and public institutions.
